nedy, already under growing pressure at home to resume tests is expected to impress on Mr. Khrushchev that precisely this would be the invitable result if the talks break down.

The proposed date of the break down.

The proposed date of the maeting would take the U.S. President to Vienna a day after he concludes his talks with General de Gaulle in Paris, scheduled for May 31-June 2. Clearly, Mr. Kennedy hopes to come to an arrangement with the French Chief of State whereby France, still excluded from the "club," would agree to suspend her Sahara experiments at least for a specific period.

EICHMANN'S 'SUGGESTION'

Puzzled Official Told to Shoot Jews

"Eichmann suggests shooting."
This is the solution which Eichmann proposed when asked how to deal with several thousand Yugoslav Jews, according to several documents submitted to the Eichmann trial court yesterday afternoon by Mr. Ya'acov Bar Or. Deputy State Attorney.

The problem arose when it became clear it was next to impossible to ship them to Russia the Government-General of Poland or Rumania.

THE JERUSALEM POST

A speedy and coordinated performance by the "foot-slogger" units won them the unstinting praise of senior Army officers who followed the clockwork-like assembly and unmechanized advance to assault positions, carried out in the pitch dark and bone-chilling damp and cold of the pre-dawn hours in the desert.

Battalion after battalion rouched in tense anticipation of the gruelling final assault without as much as a finzle of their assorted heavy equipment to betray their presence. Meanwhile, brigade headquarters went abend with a tight time-table made even more demanding by the necessity to coordinate air aspport.

Fire Orders

Radio silence was broken briefly when the units announced their on-location alerts. A few tense minutes followed and then, precisely at the prescribed 0401 "H" hour, brigade headquarters flashed the coded fire orders.

THE LIBERAL PARTY - A Necessity for Israel's National Existence

Israel vitally needs to maintain and increase its defensive power to enlist the cooperation of all forces at home and in the Zionist Movement, to win and foster trusted allies who can help it to live in peace and develop its resources.

Statement of Principles

At this juncture, old and new forces have found the strength to join together in one singleminded effort: The Liberal Party of Israel has

THE LIBERAL PARTY - A Necessity for Israel's Social Balance

On the left and off the right, forces tusting for one-man rule would have us believe that liberty is incapable of applying the daring remedies indicated by the problems of our economy and society. The danger which they present is not one of violent revolution, but of the gradual erosion of individual liberties—the first economic ones. We should by now have learned that there is no personal liberty or security without the political liberty guaranteed by a democratic, free and self-renewing system of government; and that until the individual and his family are safe from want and fear of want, the public all large cares nothing for a democratic regime and civic liberties. Sectional freedom and social security are the two mainstays of free democratic government.

The aims of the State of Israel are: To be a safe haven -- nationally, economically and socially -- for the dispersed of the Jewish Prople;

To provide strong foundations for the rebuilding of largel's age-old greatness; To become a lasting instrument for the establishment of a free and progree Jeraeli seciety, merging all that is good in old and new.

If this is to be achieved, it is imperative that we —

Make the security of the country and the integrity of its borders on the one hand, and the perpetuation of Jewish national culture throughout the world on the other hand, our foremost concern:

Maintain the Zionist Movement as the living bridge between the Nation and the Diaspora and the State of Israel; Claim freedom of emigration for Jews wishing to immigrate so Israel and establish such conditions for absorption as will make immigration attractive; Display more political initiative in improving our standing in the eyes of the powers competing for world domination; Strive for regional peace and develop continuous initiative to that · Expand our cooperation with new nations in Africa and Asia.

Reform the tax system, encourage saving and discourage inflationary tendencies by means of balances budgets, retrenchment of the public administration and widespread national saving:

Enact a constitution safeguarding the democratic-liberal character of the regime and the balance of political and social power as between the different elements of the community;

Enact a system of social welfare laws freeing the citizen from political and social dependence in all that concerns his breadwinning, health and his advancemen; in his chosen occupation. By keeping faith with the basic freedoms: .cccdom of trade association, of opinion, of speech and of press; by assuring that the tovernment is subject to check by the Law and the Courts; by effective civilian confros over the decimes system; by ensuring equative before the Law, equality of rights and equality of duties for all cinzens; and oppreventing all discrimination by reason of case, religion or community, we shall assure:

 The advancement of Israei as a creative and prosperous country, capable of maintaining itself out of its own resources and of making provision, by virtue or being a Weasre and Prosperity State, for a minimum subsistence for all, help for the weak and needy, ample opportunity for the initiative of the industrious, and suitable reward for the efficient. . The right to private property, freedom of choice of occupation, and full enjoyment by the worker of the fruits of his labour;

Provision of health and welfare services by the state;
Full and differentiated educational facilities for an according to talent and need and not to parents' means, as the casis for a so and integrated, nationally united, socially and technically advanced

· A national economy based on the ability to compete at home and abroad; Co-existence of private, state and cooperative enterprise;

Direction of state enterprise to basic economic activities, and equality of privilege for all sectors of the economy:

Prohibition of trusts and monopolies, and safeguards for the just rights and interests of the consumer.

Liberal Party will encourage the improvement of tabour, morals and the consciousness brasel's national mission in all ways of life; call for a greater pioneering and councing effort and for its recognition as a suctal and educational color; make further ris in setting the Neger and populating feature; and revive the belief of the sager generation is the national and all-human ideas of larger.

Addressing itself to all ranks of the nation, composed of members of all classes, basing its ideas on the eternal values of the Jevish people and on the new conception of Liberalism, the Liberal Party is qualified to become a central political force with serious prospects of bringing about a decisive change in power relations in the country of establishing a better balance between the needs of the community and the liberties of the individual, of encouraging tolerance for the opinion of others, and of providing a new approach to social and national problems. The time is more than ripe for a national and social awakening and for a renewal of our denocratic way of life. The Liberal Party assumes a grave responsibility; to fight for the establishment of a regime of Social Liberalism in the State of Israel.

Mr. Ben-Gurion's experted meetings with the Democratic leadear.

All these problems would require thorough conversations not only with President Kennedy, but also with Secretary of State Dean Rusk, U.S. Chief U.N. Representative Adai Stevenson and Senate Foreign Relations Committee C'hairman. William Fulbright, particularly in view of the latter's approach to the Middle East situation.

Last but not least Mr. BenGurion will have a chance this time to devote more attention to the questions of U.S. and Canadian Jewry and may be able to clear up someof the recently renewed misunderstandings that were apparently set off by the Prime Minister's statements at the last Zionist Congress and his recently published joint declaration with Mr. Jacob Blaustein of the American Jewish Committee.

Although Mr. Ben-Gurion's tour abroad precedes the elections for the Fifth Knesset by only some 10 weeks, it is unlikely to become an election issue. But for the Arab leaders recently stepped-up diplomatic activity in Washington, the visit to North America would probably have taken place in the autumn to avoid any misinterpretations on this score.

A British Parliamentary delegation headed by Sir Douglas Glover (Conservative) con-tion headed by Sir Douglas Glover (Conservative) concluded a week-long visit. The MPs toured the country extensively, spent some time at the Elchmann trial, were received by the President and conferred with Prime Minister Ben-Gurion. Before their departure they declared that they had been particularly impressed by Israel's welfare institutions, especially the new hospitals, as well as by the rise in the standard of living of the Arab population.

POST INTERVIEWPOINTS We're Disturbed...

LEONARD Bernstein put the juvenile delinquents to music in West Side Story. The authorities of New York gave them Central Park. In England the teddy boys with long hair and stove-pipe trousers strike terror into the respectable adult population. South Africa, apart from its other troubles, is bedevilled by them. Even the Marxists in their austere and self-denying Utopia admit that they are a plague in Moscow. All sorts of rumours leak into the columns of the daily press in Israel to make our flesh creep with the threat that the much-vaunted normalcy of the Jewish State includes juvenile delinquents as well as traffic cops. What is the truth? Kassem Consolidates; Lebanon Uneasy

THE ups and downs of General Kassem's fortunes since he seised power in Iraq on July 14, 1968 have been a source of endless wonder and fascination to observers of the Iraqi political scene. For close on three years the Iraqi Prime Minister has maintained the remarkable feat of manoeuvring himself out of harm's reach in face of general discontent, endless intrigues, at least one bloody military insurrection (the abortive Shawwaf revolt in Mosul in Marcit, 1959), and a well-planned and skilfully, if unsuccessfully, executed attempt on his life later the sate of all complaints and hesitated about enforcing the law, the basis of good order would crumble.

Steel Processing: A Case History Of Industrial Development (by Our Economic Editor)

The Hall of the control of the contr products.

To say this does not, of course, amount to condemning the present system or the policy of protective development. One does not need to enlarge upon the importance of expanding and diversifying the country's productive capacity. Nor is it necessary to stress the conveniences of having the supply source close at hand, obviating the need for long-range purveying, tying-up credits, etc. Moreover, one may reasonably expect local producers gradually to reduce both unit costs and profit markups as efficiency improves and sales go up. But all these considerations do not relieve the controlling authorities from the responsibility which they have assumed in suppressing the economic function of market competition.

All E.P.S. staff is Ellat-based including the compa-ny's manager, Alexander Ra-bin, the company's account-ant, and the nlant foreman who were all sent from Haifa when the new company was, satabilished. NEWS FROM THE CITRUS MARKETING BOARD

Organized spraying against the Mediterranean Fly

With the ending of the citrus season, the organized apraying of all the citrus groves in the country against the fly terminates. This centralized and well organized campaign was the work of the Agricultural Division of the Citrus Marketing Board. This year was the second the Citrus Marketing Board. This year was the second in which the campaign was successfully carried out by apray-carrying planes, in conjunction with ground crews, and in co-ordination with local representatives of board members. As a sign of the success of the campaign it should be noted that perishing of fruit on the tree, rotting in the packing heuses and the need for repacking of fruit for export were avoided. Israel fruit has attained the reputation of being fly-free. The board's experts are on the continual alert to find faults in the execution of this central campaign in order to remedy and improve them immediately. order to remedy and improve them immediately

Trial shipments

A number of trial shipments have been sent abroad this season by the Citrus Marketing Board, in co-operation with other bodies. The sim of these shipments was to test improvements in shipping and to adjust the shipments to changing marketing conditions. For example, there were shipments of unwrapped fruit in large 450-kilo containers. These were sent in accordance with the demands of the many department stores located in Europe. Similarly there were shipments of unprayed fruit and fruit wrapped in paper, dusted with a chemical likely to render unnecessary use of the diphenoid (?) which has been found unacceptable in marketing circles. All shipments were carefully checked by special inspectors of the board who report to the Agricultural Division in order to sum up and drawconclusions.

In addition to these experiments a numbber of othe actions were taken to find solutions to various problems confronting both the buyers and the packers in order to strengthen the name of Israel fruit abroad.

Noel Coward Gets Blitbe Treatment at Little Theatre

Summer Resort

THE Little Theatre has shown an unusual amount of fortitude and staying power. This English-speaking company, which started out with a few enthusiastic amateurs and semi-professionals, theatre lovers, has managed to keep going with a good deal of success. For their seventh play they have chosen Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit." At first glance it might seem that this sort of super-sophisticated ciaptrap would be too much of a challenge for a non-professional group, but it proved to have been a good choice.

"Blithe Spirit" has been seen here in the cinema and call up some spirits from the other world. She were wildest dreams when she invokes the spirit of Elvira, Charles' first wife who died some seven years ago. Elvira, a mischel-loving spirit, moves in and proceeds to take possession of the Condomine household. She determines to keep Charles with her for keep Charles with her for eternity, even if she has to kill him in the process. She-manages instead to kill Ruth and then poor Charles has two ghosts on his hands.

There was a time when visitors to this pioneer country could purchase nothing except green vases. Today, apart from excellent knitwear and arty-crafty materials and bricabrac, the peripatetic shopper can purchase a whole range of officially approved Jerusalem shekel, minted in 69 reproductions of Canaanite idols, Renaissance Hanukka Lamps, ancient Israeli oil these should go well here too.

More Forgetful

More Forgetful

Feminine air travellers are less forgetful than men where hais are concerned, but this is perhaps because ladies usually keep their hats on during the flight. This is one of the many interesting conclusions which can he drawn from the statistical data of the Lost Freperty Department at Schiphol Airport, Amsterdam.

90 per cent of these objects are found in aircraft, the rest on or near the passenger desks.

45 per cent of the total "crop" (including toys which are often forgotten by methers: appears to have been left behind by ladies. Only 11 per cent of the headgear found consists of women's hats. On the other hand, we men left behind by ladies. Only 11 per cent of the scarces, 60 per cent of the scarces, 60 per cent of the sunglasses found.

Even prama are left aboard the aircraft.

Thus every airplane arriving from a country where the climate makes it possible for infected insects to breed must be sprayed, and all planes are required to carry a certificate specifying the date of the last spraying. Seagoing ships must be inspected at least every six mont his for compulsory redent control, which often involves systematic baiting and fumigation. Standard WHO-approved forms certifying that on a specific date the vessel was inspected and found to be more or less free from rodents, or enumerating the measures taken to reduce the number of rats and mice, are among the very few papers without which no ship may leave on an international voyage. The fact that real epidemics are now unknown in most countries, is a measure of the success of the international framework within the WHO.

Child Welfare in Changing Societies

Needs Discussed In Jerusalem

THE vivacious black-eyed daughter of a Turkish general was deep in animated conversation with a shy young woman from Nigeria when we entered the Youth Aliya woman from Nigeria when we entered the Youth Aliya seminary near the German colony in Jerusalem to find out something about international child welfare. A most striking tall man from Senegal seemed to be listening with half an ear while he read "L'Information." but he told us courteously in halting English that he only understood French and was unable to keep up with the Turkish lady's machine-gun English. She explained that she was the only member of the National Child Welfare Organization in Turkey who was not under arrest because of the recent clean-up in Turkey. Her own father had been both a doctor and a soldler of renown who had trained most of the leading personalities in the Turkish army. Apparently she had little doubt that the Menderes regime was "very bad, very corrupt." with a sad shake of her head. She herself was a volunteer worker married to an archi-

Index, Burms, Africo, Israel, come together — in discussion at the lateral shake of her head. She herself was a volunteer worker married to an architect. She believed that women must have some active interest as soon as their children grow older, but that these must be combined with domestic duties. In recent years she had represented Turkey in various parts of the world and was trying to erganize the women of Turkey on the lines of Hadassah in the United States, to work like slaves, to give money and to make others give money. The lady from Nigeria had to make others give money. The lady from Nigeria had to make others give money. The lady from Nigeria had to make others give money and thad then decided to become a welfare officer. She had trained is England and agreed with her Turkish friend that one of the world and of the meeting in Jerus and the one of the world with her Turkish friend that one of the world with her Turkish friend that one of the world with her Turkish friend that one of the world with her Turkish friend that one of the most important aspects of the Seminar was the opportunity given to meet people from all over the world and be discuss problems even if it was not altegether with the International Seminar of this kind well as the world and the discuss problems even if it was not alterable and the ordinary was the opportunity given to meet people from all over the world and be discuss problems even if it was not alterable to accordingly been arranged to attend the meeting in Jerus and the discuss problems even if it was not alterable to according to the world with such widely differing that they had had no previous read to according to the world with such widely differing the country and the discussion of the world with the form Sengal flashed his teeth and eyes in a pleasant but hopeless effect to explain to us why he had taken two months off to attend the meeting in Jerus and the country and the meeting in Jerus and the country and the country strength and the country in the country were d in a pleasant but hopeleas effect to explain to us why he had taken two months off to attend the meeting in Jerusalem. Various ladies of glamorous beauty wearing a startling assortment of sariajoined us and the conversation became general. We gathered that all of them had been educated at Cambridge. Oxford, the Sorbonne and other famous centres of learning. A few men dressed in grey western suits proved to have equally lofty degrees.

The gathering then exploded with the arrival of Mr. Dan Mułock-Houwer, the Secretary-General, who is about as tranquil as an atomic bomb. He soon had the ladies dimpling around him in ecstasies of laughter. He explained to us that there was a new anobbery in the world which prescribes that nobody can do anything for another human being without having written a Master's Thesis for a famous university, adding that this rule applied even more in the developing countries than in the established enes. With an expansive wave of his arm, he said that hardly anybody in the room was a mere Bachelor of Arts, while many of them had completed their doctorates or were well on the way to this.

Patterns and Abstracts

Ruth Bamberger

The range is wide: from portrait and figure studies through pattern-emphasized landscapes to abstracts, and as usual with this artist, one is delighted by her lively colour schemes — although occasionally there is a little too much "glitter" for this reviewer — and by the interesting and well thought-out manner in which she works out her tapestry-like designs, weaving closely together the boulder-like shapes into which she divides her canvases.

Very impressive is the large Sdom landscape (26) with its vigorously rendered forms and its dusty, earth colours. Near it hangs a fine Jerusalem landscape, rich in forms and light-filled. Among the abstracts my personal preference went to No. 9—entitled "Under the Water," a delightful piece of pale yet luminous colour-patterning. Night of Study

The custom of devoting the night of the Lawgiving Festival to Torah study is ancient, many communities pieveing also that the gates of heaven are opened towards dawn and that one should direct one's prayers to God at this propitious hour. In the 15th century Tikus Leil Shaussot, a special manual of readings for Shavuöt night, was drawn up by the Kabbalists of Sarad led by Solomon Alkabets (author of the Sabbath eve Lecha Dodi hymn) and from these it apread to the Diaspora. Portions of the Torah and Mishna and Zohar, with liturgical poems and prayers, are recited the whole night long. In some communities it is the custom to conduct the study vigil in the house of persons who have lost their kin in the pase year. Since the same basic theories apply in all languages, there is no special problems in their application to Hebrew. But definite problems do stem from the facts of life in Israel. For one thing, a large proportion of Israelis have learned to write Hebrew in their later years. Consequently, their writing will be much like a schoolchild's with definitive characteristics tending to be diminished.

But helpful clues, too, can flourish in a country of immigrants — among them, the prevalence of certain recognized national characteristics of writing. Thus, says Mrs. Tamir. German writing will be writing. Thus, says Mrs. Tamir. German writing will be writing to be diminished.

The recently opened museum in Jaffa cituated in the 110-year-old house reconstructed by architect Binyamin Tschlenous and Jerusalem interior architect Nahum Maron. The architects have converted this building, which once housed the Turkish Administration and was also used as a jail, into a singularly attractive museum. It makes the perfect setting for the exhibits which range from the cave man to the construction of the Temple by Bara and Nehemia.

Ikebana International

By Stella Dagan

By Stella Dagan

ISRAEL was one of the countries represented in a large-scale international flower-arrangement show. It was on the occasion of the Asian Games, where an exhibition of ikebana was opened.

Ikebana has an irresistible attraction for foreigners living in Japan. And since there are thousands of foreigners residing there, it is no wonder that a few years ago some enterprising foreign women, together with their Japanese friends, started an an organization called Ikebana International. Its main purpose was to spread the knowledge of Japanese flower arrangement all over the world.

The response was instanarrangement all over the world.

The response was instantaneous and the success must have surpassed the expectations of the founders. In good time Ikebana International became one of the most active women's clubs in Tokyo, with the largest membership. There were a wide range of activities, ranging from regular courses to exhibitions, from meetings with the most famous Japanese masters of the art to creating a wide network of branches in many European and American cities. The club also published an English monthly for members all over the world. The organization also has branches teaching arts related to likebana, namely Bonsai (the growing of dwarf trees). Not many self-respecting I larseli males are prepared to act as fashion models. They feel, somehow, that it is hardly in keeping with the virile Israeli tradition — and who can blame, them? But last week an exception appeared on the scene.
Moishele, still far too young to go to school, almost stole the show at a fashion parade that was held last Saturday evening at the Kings Hotel, Jerusalem. The diminutive Moishele, with a bigger girl as his partner, went straight to the maternal hearts of his audience when he modelled a brother-and-sister outfit and especially when, in a solo appearance, he decided to wave to the gallery too.
This was no ordinary fashion parade but the annual

THE answer to that is, of course, that I will stop the first male driver I see and ask for his help, but I fear that this answer will not be acceptable so I explain that when I was taught to drive, the sergeant instructor used to beg us not to monkey about with the motors. "Just you do the driving, girls," he used to say, "and if anything goes wrong send for the corporal. He won't thank you it you try to repair the fault with a hairpin or something."

THIS explanation seems reasonable to the examiner and he passes me without further ado. Only five months to wait for my practical. Hope I can keep calm and cheerful until then.

down to her waist.

She considered her best meeting one of 1,000 persons in a convention hall in Toronto. She spoke, in English of course, for 70 minutes. Then she was informed that Marlene Dietrich had arrived and wished to join the meeting. Marlene came in and sat near Aliza while the latter was speaking. A million dollars was raised, and the Bonds representative said "Enough let's sing Hatikva." Then Marlene, who had recently returned from Israel, rose, said a few words which greatly moved the audience. On Marlene's initiative, every, one who was photographed together with Aliza bought $1.000 worth of Bonds. Which brought the meeting's total sales to $1.5m.

In the U.S. she met with several film stars was offered a role in a Marion Brando film, which she declined ow-

Mr. Leo Krown, Director of the Israel Office of the Bond Drive, said 1980 was one of the Drive's best years, and that Aliza had contributed greatly in making it so. She had done everything the Bonds had asked of her. Mrs. Hemda Moses, Editor of "La'isha," expressed similar sentiments, and said the 12th Jarael beauty, queen contest would shortly take place.

Tora v'Avoda-Religious Revolution

New Type of Yesbiva Youth

By YEHUDA HAFFNER

If ever men were misunderatood, it was those early religious pioneers. They tumbled ashore in Jaffa and made their way in ones and twos to the workcamps of Petah Tikva, Rishon Lezion and Hadera. They too wanted to construct roads, drain swamps and build a new society, but in addition they wanted to continue to pray three times a day, observe the Sabbath and eat kosher food. Such habits were taboo to most of their fellow-pioneers of the Third Aliya, to whom religious practice was as distasteful as the bourgeois values of their unproductive past. These Yeahiva students also failed to attract the aympathy of the established orthodo: population: to them these young men who were now blistering their hands on the crude them these to the matter of Central Europe. MILA 18 Leon Uris

nost powerful newest novel

MUNICIPAL Y B

inspired by the heroism of the small band of Warsane Chetto Jews who fought the German army for 42 incredible days and nights, Uris has written an unforgettable epic with all the conviction and drama of "EXODUS" the free world.

Mila 18 is the story of Andrei Andreiaki. Poish cavalry officer and patriot, who knows that the only hope for his copie is to strike back at the Nast butchers: of Gabriella cak, who loves him and chooses to remain in Warsaw rather than return to America and her Catholic family; of Alexander Brandel, scholar and parifiet, who was determined to save his people by not resisting the Nasis.

Mila 18 encompasses the collective transets of over one half million victims of the Warsaw Ghetto on a scale so be untingly personal that it is destined to become a lasting symbol of man's courses and eternal struggle to remain free.

NEW Students Dictionary - English - Hebrew by YAFFA ALONY-FAINBERG

NOW ON SALE Compiled for pupils and based on the sylabus of both elementary and high schools, up to the eleventh grade. A useful and easy-to-handle book. Main grammatical changes of the words are noted. A special section containing thousands of words — neura and adjectives — shows how they are derived from verbs. Important to the pupils in preparing the exercises in their test books and also in preparing for the matriculation examination.

Includes 8.800 words. Use of this dictionary facilitates the transition to atandard editions.
